

The Inquirer

DAILY NEWS philly●com

In the galleries: Art picks for May

by Allie Volpe, Posted: May 4, 2015

Flowers aren't the only things that are blooming this spring. Great art is sprouting in galleries and museums throughout the area in May.

In an online, digital world, it's only natural that forms of artistic expression have taken that turn as well. Esther Klein Gallery (3600 Market St.) holds four works hosted on web browsers through Friday, May 22. Check it out from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Art and science converge through sculptures based on sciences of the natural, physical and chemical realms during "Natural Impulses" at Locks Gallery (600 Washington Square South) on view until Saturday, May 23. The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Large-scale panoramic paintings based off of artist Rebecca Rutstein's interest in geology and juxtapositions between organic and geometric styles are on view at Bridgette Mayer Gallery (709 Walnut St.) until Saturday, May 30. "Afterglow" is available to view from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.